

PHUKET'S PERANAKAN COMMUNITY

Baba and Yaya are terms used for the descendants of late 19th century Chinese immigrants to Phuket. Baba is used for male and Yaya for female. "Peranakan" is a Malay term that, literally translated, means "of mixed race". Over the centuries it has become used to identify the descendants of the first Chinese settlers in southern Thailand and peninsular Malaysia and their locally-born wives. The great majority of these Chinese migrants came from southern Fujian Province and spoke Hokkien dialect. Hard-working and ambitious, they were commercially successful, gradually developing and expanding both local and regional trade. Before too long many were rich – but since few Chinese women made the long and adventurous journey south, they lacked Chinese wives. The solution was close at hand – intermarriage with local Malay and Thai women. In this way, the Peranakan community was born, with the descendants of the original hardy and adventurous Chinese migrants adopting many facets of local culture, while retaining their commercial links with home and with each other.

BABA YAYA CULTURE & WAY OF LIFE

Phuket is also a part of this Peranakan world, but with the important distinction that the original Hokkien settlers integrated with Thai culture, making Phuket's position as a Peranakan centre both distinctive and unique. Today Phuket's Baba-Yaya are proudly reasserting their distinctive culture. But what does it mean to be Peranakan? An old adage has it that: "The test of a true Baba is to eat chili without flinching." Yet beyond this Phuket's Baba-Yaya really are peranakan or "mixed" in the fullest cultural sense of the term.

The first language of the Baba Yaya community is central Thai, the lingua franca of the Thai Kingdom. Yet they also have their own patois, based on a mix of southern Thai, Hokkien, Malay and English. Yaya cuisine, too, is as distinctive as it is delicious. Spicier and less sweet than the Malay Peranakan cuisine, it employs more chili, coconut milk, lemon grass and coriander. Pork dishes, too, are popular – a meat quite alien to the Muslim element of the Malay Nyonya tradition.
